NC.HLTH-249 NC.HLTH-250	Medical Terminology Medical Scribe	NC.HLTH-249: Mirrored Version of HLHSCI-249. NC.HLTH-250:As the health care sector continues to adopt electronic medical records while serving the increasingly aging population, it looks to improve efficiencies by hiring medical scribes. Scribes serve as first hand assistants to physicians and primarily document physician/patient interactions and complete all patient medical records generated from the encounter. Evidence shows more and more hospitals and doctor's clinics are hiring scribes to document doctor/patient care interactions as well as much of the patient care details. As a matter of fact, conversations around this course were initiated based on a request from an industry partner and further supported by Advisory Board members. Minutes of the meeting are available for review. In addition, labor market data supports the development of this course. For example, in a 2018 report on titled "Health Care Services in The Los Angeles Basin - A High-Growth Industry" funded by the State Chancellor's Office and prepared by the LO Regional Consortium and industry partners, medical scribes, which fall under the Health Information Technology category, is identified as an emerging high growth occupation (the fourth out of 15 occupations). The report states: "Target Middle-Skill Occupations Middle-skill occupations predicted to have significant job prospects over the next five years and that stand to benefit from investment into postsecondary non-degree and career education programs include RNs and LVNs, medical records and health information technicians, and medical and clinical laboratory technicians."	H.
